6,000-mile range rocket

China may fire new missile

LONDON (AP) — New Western estimates suggest Red China may test fire a 6,000-mile-range rocket in 1969.

These estimates were made known Sunday by Asian and European diplomats who said they are based on intelligence information pooled by several non-Communist countries, including the United States.

The informants reported that, if the Chinese test of an intercontinental ballistic missile proves successful, the Peking government will be able to begin stockpiling the weapons by 1972.

And in 1975, or thereabouts, the Chinese at their present rate of progress should be in a position to deploy 15 or 20 ICBMs.

If these forecasts turn out to be accurate they would denote a three-year gain in China's nuclear weapons program as envisaged in recent times by top American and other authorities.

Former U.S. Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara told the North Atlantic Council in mid-December 1965 the Chinese then had begun work on an ICBM development program. He suggested this could result in "an initial deployment as early as 1975." This forecast was widely accepted as a basis of allied counterplanning.

A Chinese entry into the highly exclusive long-range missile club would pose far-reaching military and political implications, notably for the United States.

Militarily it could generate stronger pressures for the extension of the limited antiballistic missile system already under development in the United States.

Politically it could generate stronger pressures for ending the policies that have isolated the Chinese giant from the rest of the world.

The Chinese fired their first atomic bomb in October 1964—19 years after the Americans did so, 15 years after the Russians, 12 years after the British and four years after the French. But since then they have out-paced the rest in the rate of progress.

None of this means, the informants stressed, that the Chinese in the decade or so ahead will be in any position to match either Americans or Russians in nuclear power.

Communications satellite will help overseas coverage

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Two powerful communications satellites are to be launched here this week, one commercial, the other military.

The commercial payload is to more than double satellite telephone and television channels across the Pacific. The military vehicle is a test bed for a tactical system that would link units in the field and on ships and aircraft.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration plans Wednesday night to launch the Intelsat 3-Pacific satellite for the 63-nation International Telecommunications Satellite Consortium.

On Friday, the Air Force is to orbit the largest communications payload ever built. It weighs 1,600 pounds and has a communications capacity of 10,000 two-way telephone channels.

By comparison, Intelsat 3-Pacific, which matches the most powerful communications package now in space, weighs 322 pounds and can handle 1,200 phone conversations simultaneously. It also can carry four television programs.

Both are to be lofted into stationary orbits 22,300 miles above the equator.

From its post high above the Gilbert Islands, Intelsat 3-Pacific will increase substantially coverage between North America, Hawaii and the Far East. Two other Pacific satellites operated by the consortium have a total of 400 channels.

The military satellite has a cluster of antennas to radiate signals that can be picked up by all types of ground terminals, including transportable antennas as small as one foot in diameter.

This would permit small Army or Marine units in the field to communicate via satellite with each other and with headquarters. Aircraft also could talk back and forth and with ground units, and patrol boats could contact a larger ship or a shore base, in any weather. Such a system also could aid in search and rescue operations.

U. S. blast packs wallop

HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — A blast described as "the largest controlled gas explosion ever detonated anywhere" was touched off Sunday in an underground salt cavern. It packed the punch of about 315 tons of TNT.

The methane gas blast simulating a nuclear explosion was the first in a planned series of three controlled experiments of the Defense Department's Project Miracle Play.

Mercy plane makes Biafra landing

COTONOU, Dahomey (AP) — After three futile tries, a Red Cross plane loaded with 14 tons of food for Biafra's million starving civilians landed in the secessionist territory Sunday.

It was the first Red Cross transport to do so since airlifts from the island of Fernando Po were suspended Jan. 7. It also was the first to take off from the new International Red Cross base in Cotonou.

Red Cross sources said the Biafrans turned away the plane on previous attempts at landing because it did not have the proper code word.

Other planes from church groups operating independently of the Red Cross, from the Portuguese island of Sao Tome and Libreville, Gabon, were allowed to land while the Red Cross aircraft circled the Umuahia airport.

"It's not politics, it is humanitarian," said Dr. August Lindt, Swiss ambassador to Moscow and West Africa and relief coordinator for the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Red Cross sources said Lindt asked permission to land four times before it was granted.

More low-income housing Romney's aim as HUD chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Romney lists low-income housing as the principal problem facing him as secretary of housing and urban development.

And he said Sunday that to alleviate the problem, more housing must be built at lower cost and more money applied to housing construction but that the funds must come more from private sources than government.

Romney, former governor of Michigan, made his comments on the NBC television-radio program "Meet the Press."

Asked what the chief problem confronting him was, he replied: "Well, I would say housing for low-income families. The principal problem is to improve housing for our people generally throughout the country."

Romney said that former President Johnson's stated goal of 26 million new homes in the country in the next 10 years suits the need but that it isn't very realistic.

"As far as I am able to ascertain in terms of need, and I emphasize in terms of need, the 26 million goal appears to be sound statistically" but "I don't think the programs that we have at the present time will achieve these goals. I think the talk has been much bigger than the performance... than the programs."

Consequently, Romney said, one of his most immediate problems is "to determine what we can do with present programs."

Asked if he feels housing costs can be reduced, Romney replied: "I wouldn't be here if I didn't."

He said the reductions could "come all along the line" in labor, materials, interest and land.

Romney, however, did not specify how he thinks this can be achieved.

Nixon readies U.S. strategy in Mideast

Israelis threaten reprisals

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel has warned Iraq that if any more Iraqi Jews are harmed, the Baghdad regime will suffer reprisals, the usually well-informed newspaper Maariv said Sunday.

Israel's foreign ministry denied knowledge of any such warning. But anger has swept Israel since the execution last Monday of 14 Iraqis, including nine Jews, on spy charges.

Israeli anger increased when Iraq announced Friday that it would place 13 more Jews on trial soon.

Maariv, which gave no source, said Israeli officials had gotten across a warning to Iraq.

"Official parties have, in an unofficial way," said the paper, "informed Iraq that Israel will not stand for the hanging of Jews in market places and any further harm to the remainder of the Iraqi Jewish community will in the end bring damage to the Baghdad regime—damage for which Israel will be responsible in one way or another."

In Beirut, diplomatic sources expressed hope that Iraqi authorities will soon release Paul Ball, American oil engineer held in Baghdad. Iraqi Information Minister Abdullah Samarraji said Ball had been arrested "for actions related to spying" but that the government "would be tolerant toward him."

Violence flared Sunday in the Gaza Strip, where Israeli troops grappled with thousands of stone-throwing Arab schoolgirls. The rioters were protesting the sentencing by an Israeli military court of three Gaza women accused of spying and aiding guerrillas. One was sentenced to three years in jail and the others to two years each.

In Amman, a Jordan army spokesman charged that two Israeli jet fighters violated Jordanian air space but were chased away by Arab groundfire.

In Tel Aviv, the semi-official newspaper Davar said its London correspondent received assurances from a Soviet spokesman that Moscow wants "only peace and stability in the Middle East."

Reds deny new stand in Paris

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam's broadest denial of reports it had modified its stand in the Paris peace talks lent support Sunday to a view among some Americans here that Hanoi is prepared for a long deadlock.

The impression among some diplomatic sources is that, in fact, the position has frozen on both sides and that little progress can be expected for some time.

Following last Thursday's 7½-hour meeting, there were reports diplomatic sources had detected a subtle shift of emphasis in a speech by North Vietnamese Ambassador Xuan Thuy. Others, however, discounted this and dismissed such searching for hidden meaning as a relatively futile exercise at this stage.

The United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the National Liberation Front of the Viet Cong met again next Thursday. The prospects for the next meeting appeared to be repetition of arguments minutely detailed at the last one.

The Hanoi broadcast restated North Vietnam's basic demand: That the United States must withdraw from South Vietnam and let the Vietnamese settle their affairs "in accordance with the program" of the NLF. The broadcast quoted an article in the official newspaper Nhan Dan.

The article portrayed the North Vietnamese as adhering determinedly to their stand

Pueblo skipper used coffee cup

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Lloyd Mark "Pete" Bucher kicked some pipe fittings, swore and hurled a coffee cup at the North Korean gunboat coming alongside the USS Pueblo.

He told a court of inquiry, which resumes today after a three-day recess, about booting the pipes and about his sailor's language. But he saved the story about the coffee cup to tell a friend.

Bucher grabbed the cup from the Pueblo's bridge and flung it across a chunk of the Sea of Japan. It shattered on the deck of the gunboat.

"It was a study in frustration," says Lt. Cmdr. Alan Hemphill, a close friend who once served with Bucher. Hemphill thinks there is a growing misconception about the skipper who surrendered his ship, resulting in 11 months of captivity for the crew.

"He's being pictured as a humanitarian, sort of a good guy," Bucher Brown would give up his ship no matter what to keep his men from getting hurt," says Hemphill.

Bucher was indeed deeply torn between the loss of his vessel, the U.S. intelligence ship Pueblo, and the safety of his men, says Hemphill.

Bucher told the court he passed the word, "Prepare to receive the Koreans aboard," to prevent the slaughter of his crew.

And it wasn't until the North Koreans threatened to shoot his men in front of him, one by one starting with the youngest.

DeGaulle calls for revision

QUIMPER, France (AP) — President Charles de Gaulle announced Sunday that a referendum will be held this spring on a constitutional revision to reform the Senate and give regions of France a greater voice in shaping their own destinies.

Government officials have been studying the move to decentralize the all-powerful Paris administration for months. It was no secret that De Gaulle intended to put it into effect with a referendum, but no firm date has been proposed.

President considers initiatives

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon said Sunday night that "we are considering all the initiatives we might take to defuse the situation" in the Middle East.

This was after Nixon had spent 50 minutes consulting with former President Dwight D. Eisenhower on the critical Middle Eastern problem, along with the situation in the NATO alliance. The two met at Eisenhower's suite at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, where the five-star general is convalescing from a series of heart attacks.

Nixon said, too, that "Yes," he plans to talk with his predecessor, Lyndon B. Johnson, about the crisis in the Middle East. Nixon said that procedures have been set up for keeping Johnson briefed completely. He said his first talk with Johnson probably will be by telephone, since he knows of no plans for Johnson to come to Washington and he has no early trip to the LBJ ranch in Texas in mind.

Nixon took Henry A. Kissinger, his top assistant on national security affairs, along to the hospital conference with Eisenhower.

The chief executive talked briefly with reporters afterward on the steps of the hospital building.

Nixon was remained at a news conference Monday he had characterized the Middle East situation as potentially explosive, and was asked whether there is any change now.

"No," he replied. "The situation is as I described it last Monday. We have done nothing during this week to change it."

It was then that he said initiatives that might defuse the situation are being considered. Nixon said he got some excellent advice from Eisenhower. He said he was impressed with the general's knowledge of problems involved in the Mideast area, and the personalities and forces involved.

Nixon plans NATO trip

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon expects to make a flying visit to several western European capitals sometime in the next two months to confer with heads of allied governments.

The trip, according to present plans, will be completed and the President will be back in Washington before foreign ministers of the North Atlantic alliance gather here in early April to observe the 20th anniversary of NATO.

An announcement of the trip is expected in the near future. Nixon does not plan to meet with Soviet leaders on this tour, but it is known that he hopes to have such a meeting at some later time.

Planners look 50 years ahead at Eastern Seaboard megalopolis

By ROBERT S. VAN FLEET
Chief, Offaway News Service
Albany Bureau

NEW YORK CITY — About 400 planning specialists squinted into the future of the Boston-New York-Washington corridor as far as the year 2020 during a two-day conference Thursday and Friday and found the going slightly murky.

As for problems, they found themselves considering many of the ones that plague the region today: dirty air, clogged transit, run-down cities, monotonous suburbs, and a proliferation of too-small governmental units.

The conference at the Waldorf-Astoria was sponsored by the governors of the eight states in the region—Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, and Maryland—with Gov.

Rockefeller of New York as honorary chairman and main dinner speaker.

Other sponsors included Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York (who addressed a luncheon session), eight chapters of the American Institute of Planners, and three large utility companies.

The conference, built around presentation of five scholarly research papers, was part of a $12 million study program conducted for the American Institute of Planners by William R. Ewald Jr.

Title for the meeting was "Building the Future Environment—An Atlantic Region Perspective to the Year 2020."

Boris Pushkarev, planning director of the Regional Plan Assn., described the northeastern seaboard as "the world's largest urban cluster."

He said the 1966 population of 47.1 million constituted 22 per cent of the nation, settled on 1.3 per cent of the land area. He predicted that by 2020 there would be 95 million people in the same 126,000 square miles.

Pushkarev said this raised the question of whether efforts should be made to redistribute population more evenly across the continent.

He predicted that continued growth of population will be due—by the end of the century—"almost exclusively of natural increase, the excess of births over deaths." This means that migration as a source of new people in the region will drop "because of the dwindling reservoir of rural population."

The planner said the character of jobs in the region is changing toward a greater number of white collar jobs and that the sector is expected "to remain the white collar capital of the nation and, to some extent, the world."

The "frontier" of growth in population is in the belts around the outer edges of suburbs "where future shape is being rather inadequately determined by opportunistic highway location, precipitous land speculation, lagging public services, and skyrocketing costs of providing them."

Proposed action for the future fell into two main areas: natural resources and transportation.

One proposal on use of natural resources called for acquisition of 10,000 square miles of new parkland—at a cost in excess of $1 billion—along the Appalachian mountain chain in parts of 10 states, including Massachusetts, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire, New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia.

This was proposed as a federal project because individual states could not afford it. For example, West Virginia, deep in poverty, could not justify buying parks that would be used primarily by residents of Washington, nor would residents of Connecticut rush to buy parks for residents of New York.

Another inter-regional problem is water management because the basins of the 14 major rivers in the Atlantic region do not confine themselves to state boundaries.

Water is becoming less and less a local matter. Mayor Lindsay, for example, said New York City is studying the advisability of going all the way north to the Adirondack Mountains for new sources of water.

But it was the field of transportation that planners found a major concern. They talked about movement of residents from home to work and the longer movements from those who travel from one part of the seaboard region to another.

Allentown 'commutershed'

Planners list 21 "commutersheds" in the region, areas in which there is a daily ebb and flow of residents between outer fringes and the urban core. These include not only Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington, but also such places as Albany, Allentown, Bridgeport, Hartford, New Haven and Providence.

Population of the 21 commutersheds in 1960 was 35.5 million, with 7.6 million of them (54 per cent of the labor force) working in a central city.

The linkage of various parts of the region by air and ground transit is considered a vital matter by planners. They insist that someone—probably the federal government—must continue to experiment with new ways of providing high-speed ground and air transportation.

One of the interesting proposals under study is an underground "gravity-vacuum tube" (GVT) running from a proposed airport north of Boston to Dallas Airport west of Washington.

Railroad-type cars carrying passengers would speed down and up a series of gentle roller-coaster dips between stations at speeds as high as 420 miles an hour. But average speed—after making stops an average of 16 miles apart—would be 175 miles an hour.

The scheme could be designed for a 12-stop trip from New York to Washington in 72 minutes—or 50 minutes with just six stops.

New York to Boston with 12 stops would take about 73 minutes.

As an example of commuting time, it would take only 16 minutes from Bridgeport to midtown Manhattan (with two stops at Norwalk and White Plains). The run from Providence to Boston, also with two intermediate stops, would be 16 minutes.

The regional Plan Assn. has urged construction of a $10 million, full-scale GVT test facility somewhere in the region.

One planner said the same sort of national effort that was put into the space program could produce equally dramatic results in high-speed ground transit.

No retreats, Rights backers warn Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional civil rights backers from both parties are serving notice on the Nixon administration they will fight any retreat in federal efforts to desegregate Southern schools.

And they are warning warily to see how the new administration will respond to Sen. Strom Thurmond's request for further review of an important case involving federal desegregation standards for textile firms seeking fat defense contracts.

Informed sources indicate that hearings by committees of the Democratic-controlled Congress are a distinct possibility.

Predictably, Republicans emphasized their praise and Democrats their concern in assessing Secretary of Welfare Robert H. Finch's two-way action in the case of five Southern school districts facing a cutoff of federal funds.

Finch last week upheld the Johnson administration's decision that funds should be stopped to the districts, which have failed to develop desegregation plans. But he permitted a 60-day period in which the districts still could qualify to get the funds retroactively.

Six liberal Republican senators issued a statement calling Finch's action "a most generous approach, too generous in any other situation but the one which faced the new administration" because the deadline came 30 days after it took over.

But they said that school districts should be told that standards will be strictly enforced by this administration.

Route 6 accident kills young woman

MILFORD — A 36-year-old Carbondale woman became Pike County's first auto fatality victim of the year when the car she was riding in crashed into a utility pole off Route 6 Saturday and snapped in two.

The woman, Patricia Ann Seeley of 129 Salem Ave., died in the Tilton Fire Co. ambulance while enroute to Wayne County Memorial Hospital, Honesdale.

Driver of the car, Francis Judge, 25, of 21 Wayne Ave., Carbondale, was released around noon Sunday from Wayne Memorial Hospital. He was treated for cuts and contusions.

The accident, according to Milford State Police, occurred at 6:30 p.m. Saturday on Route 6 in Lackawaxen Township about 14 miles west of Milford.

Judge was driving his car east on the highway when he failed to negotiate a right hand curve. The car went off the highway and careened into a utility pole.

Impact of the collision snapped the car in two just in front of the windshield and threw both occupants out of the car. Dr. Vincent Tully pronounced Miss Seeley dead at the hospital.

The area of the crash, police said, was covered by mist at the time of the accident, but it was not foggy.

Miss Seeley was thrown 46 feet from the car and against a tree stump.

Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings had said Miss Seeley died of a compound fractured skull.

Civil jury absolves motorist

EASTON — A Bangor woman has been absolved of liability for the death of a Roseto woman during a car accident more than two years ago.

The woman, Arlene DeFranco of 445 Broadway, Bangor, was absolved by a Northampton County civil court jury Friday.

Mrs. DeFranco was involved in an accident Sept. 23, 1966, which resulted in the death of Mrs. Lizzie Ruggiero of Roseto.

Mrs. DeFranco and her husband were defendants in an action brought by Genevieve Ruggiero of 212 Roseto Ave., Roseto, for the death of her mother.

The accident occurred during a heavy rain on Route 191 in Roseto. Mrs. Ruggiero was struck by the DeFranco car while crossing the highway.

Attorney William B. Eagan, representing the Ruggiero family, claimed that Mrs. DeFranco's car was on the wrong side of the highway.

The accident, contended Stanley Stetz, attorney for the DeFranco's, was unavoidable. Stetz contended the car was on the right side of the highway and that Mrs. DeFranco did not see the woman.

SCIATICA By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder

One of the most important functions of the human body is SLEEP. It is just as important as air, water, and food. The inability to sleep over a long period of time would result in sheer exhaustion. In short, your body cannot do without it.

Some of the causes of sleeplessness are under your control, but the inability to fall asleep is usually the result of more subtle disorders over which you have no control. Perhaps because you are tense or may experience various aches and pains.

A visit to your Chiropractor may quickly remedy this situation allowing the body to efficiently perform all of its functions.

Scott adds refreshing view to huge stack of reforms

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Hawley News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The Government Printing Office has been busy for the past three weeks publishing copies of bills and resolutions filed at the capitol since congress convened on Friday, Jan. 3. At least 4,700 separate measures had been introduced at last count and the end is not in sight.

It's important to note that the great majority of these bills contain little that is new. Most are repeats of proposals that have been kicking around for a number of years and, as yet, there is little or nothing to reflect the ideas or directions of the Nixon Administration.

The Nixon program will find its way to the capitol via the Republican leadership in congress when the president is ready. Nixon told his first news conference that he will have a "major" legislative program but he's not sure whether he will wrap it up in one "State of the Union" package or send up a number of separate messages.

Thus, what congress has before it now can best be described as a pot pourri of constituents demands, a fulfilling of scores of promises to people and groups. There are pet proposals and purely political proposals.

But, judging from the early introductions, electoral reform is one of the more popular subjects in the new Congress. While almost everyone, it seems, wants to revise the present winner-take-all method of electing a president and vice president, the current betting is that a majority of congress can't rally behind any one of the five or six proposals.

Since most of the plans involve proposed constitutional amendments, it will take a two-thirds vote, rather than a majority, just to get a new electoral system before the states for ratification.

The Nixon Administration's approach isn't yet known although he has given the impression that the so-called proportional plan would be most acceptable. Under this plan, the electoral vote in each state would be split and allocated in exact proportion to the popular vote.

There is one innovative approach in the batch of electoral reform measures. This is the resolution filed by the new Senate Republican whip, Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania, who is hoping to interest the White House in backing his modified "District" plan.

Scott would abolish the office of elector and allocate votes by congressional district. He would give two electoral votes (corresponding to each State's representation in the United States) to the presidential ticket winning a plurality of a state's popular vote. The ticket would also win one additional electoral vote for each congressional district it carried by plurality.

The Pennsylvania senator would keep the total number of electoral votes exactly where it stands today — equal to the number of members of the House and Senate. The ticket receiving a majority of the total number of electoral votes cast would be elected and if none received a majority, congress in joint session would select a president and vice president from the top three tickets.

Scott's plan does not accommodate the rising interest in a direct popular election but it would at least eliminate the winner-take-all method by which a candidate now receives all of a state's electoral votes if the majority of the popular vote is cast for his ticket.

It would, Scott believes, strengthen the two-party system by encouraging the minority party in currently one-party states. More importantly, he feels it would not enhance the chances of splinter parties because they could have little hope of diverting more than a few electoral votes from one major party candidate.

Old hands around congress are not optimistic about electoral reform. The general feeling is that it must come this year — and rather quickly — if it is to make the rounds of the states in time to have any direct effect on the 1972 elections.

But one staff assistant who has worked on bills going back to the abortive attempts at "reform" in the early 1950's sees little chance of action. "You'll see it when an election is determined in the House or when you have a minority president." Most supporters agree that it will take a massive outpouring of public interest — greater than what there has been to date — before Congress moves.

Student statistics tell vo-tech story

Does Monroe County need a vocational technical school?

This is a question that has been making the rounds of school boards in recent years and there has been a mixed reaction.

However, statistics answer the question in a positive manner. Monroe County does need a vocational technical school if it is to give the youth of the community a well rounded education.

Over the past seven years, an average of 36 per cent of Monroe County's high school graduates have attended college, while 25 per cent have entered business schools, nursing schools and the armed forces.

This leaves an average of 39 per cent over that period of time for which there was no further school available.

The percentage of students attending college has risen from 31 in 1962 to the present 43 per cent. It was also 31 per cent in 1963, 36 in 1964, 34 in 1965, 36 in 1966 and 40 in 1967.

Those entering the service and business and nursing schools in 1962 formed 26 per cent of the seniors who graduated from high school the previous June. The percentage dropped to 23 in 1963, bounced back to 26 in 1964 and then moved to 28 per cent in 1965, before dropping back to 27 per cent in 1966. In 1967 the percentage was only 22.

High school graduates who didn't further their education or enter the service in 1962 made up 43 per cent of the June graduates. The figure rose to 46 per cent in 1963, then dropped to 38 per cent in 1965, 37 in 1966 and 38 per cent in 1967.

There is a belief among some area educators that as high as 80 per cent of those not taking part in any post-high school education would attend vocational technical courses if they were available in the area.

It has also been pointed out that many boys entering the service do so in order to learn a trade. This group would also, in part, enter vo-tech training on a local basis, educators believe.

A vocational technical school would also be an asset to the community, as it would make available a much more skilled worker, the type being sought by competitive industry today.

Industries showing an interest in Monroe County in recent years have asked on many occasions whether or not vocational technical schools were available. This may have had an influence on the industries in question deciding to settle elsewhere.

A vocational technical school will lead to a more skilled labor market. It will give local industry a better employee. It will bring higher wages and boost the economy of the area and it will at least help in keeping our younger people in this area, rather than having them seek their fortunes elsewhere.

Can we afford not to have a vocational technical school?

Allén-Goldsmith Report

Court warning

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Earl Warren is confronted with a new forceful demand that the Supreme Court tighten its rules of procedure so as to preclude "arbitrary and capricious" decrees by its members.

Unless the tribunal itself institutes such corrective measures, legislation imposing curbs will be vigorously sought in Congress.

That's the stern warning to Warren in a letter from Rep. F. Edward Hebert, D-La., chairman of the House Armed Services subcommittee on National Guard and reserve affairs and the draft.

The influential legislator's ire was aroused by a number of stays granted by Justice William O. Douglas, an openly avowed "pacenik," blocking the sending of guardsmen and reservists to Vietnam. In every instance, such restraining orders had previously been denied by lower federal courts and other members of the Supreme Court — including the Chief Justice and Justices Black, Brennan, Harlan and White.

Also in several of these cases, it is charged Douglas acted in a "highly irregular manner."

Every one of Douglas' stays was subsequently thrown out by the Supreme Court as a whole.

"Justice Douglas' action, then and since," Hebert wrote Warren, "has reflected a complete and utter lack of judicial restraint, and in my view was prompted solely by his sense of political activism — in short, his apparent opposition to the war in Vietnam."

"I cannot pretend to assess the total mischief effected by the stay orders issued by Justice Douglas. However, the gravity of his action is aptly reflected in the observation of one of my congressional colleagues, who said: 'To me it is unjustifiable that litigants can shop among the justices until they find one who will grant a stay.'"

"This procedure could be extremely damaging in an emergency that occurred while the Court was not in session."

Renewed warning

Rep. Hebert's sharp letter is the second he has written to Warren demanding procedural changes to put an end to such high-handed and biased action as displayed by Douglas.

The issue was first raised by Hebert last fall when Douglas granted a stay to a company of Maryland guardsmen after their being repeatedly rebuffed by lower courts and several Supreme Court members. In that letter, Hebert bluntly told Warren that "bizarre circumstances surrounded the issuing of this stay which in my view clearly indicate that Justice Douglas was either unaware of the implications of his actions, or worse, chose to disregard them entirely."

Hebert strongly urged that the Supreme Court itself take steps to crack down on such procedural free-wheeling. He warned that unless that was done, congress would be strongly impelled to act.

Warren's reply was evasively noncommittal.

He completely ignored the issue of tightening the court's rules of procedure, but did say Douglas' controversial stay would be promptly considered. It was, and was thrown out. The balking guardsmen had to go to Vietnam.

In Hebert's latest letter he makes it pointedly clear that he does not intend to let the matter rest.

The veteran lawmaker flatly charges that as a result of Douglas' stay "some 17 cases contesting the legality of the order to active duty of reserve and National Guard units or personnel were initiated . . . The publicity given to his order unquestionably encouraged others to bring these additional suits."

Specific instances

Hebert's five-page letter to Warren details specific instances in which the 70-year-old, four-times married militant liberal Douglas granted stays after they had been denied by other federal courts and jurists.

"The fact that you, as chief justice, and other associate justices found no basis for the issuance of a stay order and had denied the request, deferred Justice Douglas not at all," declared Hebert. "His apparent conviction that the Congress of the United States and the President should be prevented from continuing the war in Vietnam appeared to be his overriding objective."

The late Chief Justice Stone and the late Justice Felix Frankfurter were cited by Hebert as sternly cautioning against the Supreme Court's attempting to lay down policy. Said Frankfurter in a 1958 case, "It is not the business of this Court to pronounce policy . . . Self-restraint is the essence of the judicial oath." Stone declared, "The only check upon our own exercise of power is by our own sense of self-restraint."

"Fortunately," continued Hebert, "some men possess the ability and the willingness to exercise self-restraint in judicial offices and not permit their actions to be influenced and clouded by their emotional involvement in national issues. Others, however, do not. Justice Douglas obviously does not."

Reference book

WASHINGTON — Before becoming one of President Richard Nixon's White House aides, William Safire ran a New York public relations agency. And it was while doing this, in the midst of the recent campaign, that he turned out a book I've just gotten around to reading.

Actually, it's more of a reference book, or something you might browse through occasionally. I doubt if anyone would read straight through it any more than he might consume Bartlett's "Familiar Quotations" at a single sitting. Safire's book is called "The New Language of Politics" (Random House).

The book's dust jacket pretty much brings you into the picture: "This is a dictionary with about the art of the possible . . . it will meet with a hail of dead cats from cookie pushers who use smokescreens of bombing and will be denounced by bleeding hearts, muckshakers, consynops, rednecks, snollygosters, and little ladies in tennis shoes."

New dimension

WASHINGTON — President Richard Nixon is adding an important new dimension to the coming arms-control talks with the Soviets.

He intends to use the nuclear talks for a large purpose — to begin to remove some of the causes of the cold war.

This means he would put both political issues and the arms-control issue on the conference table at the same time.

Nixon is putting this question to the Soviet Union: Will you cut back the cold war in order to join the United States in reducing the risk and cost of the nuclear arms race?

Put another way: Does Moscow prefer to press cold-war ventures — in the Middle East, the Mediterranean, the Persian Gulf, Czechoslovakia, Berlin — or to halt the Soviet-U.S. arms race to the benefit of both countries?

This is the new dimension Nixon is adding to the prospective negotiations with the Soviets. This is apparently part of his "new tactics" which he mentioned at his first press conference.

Middle course

Nixon is choosing a middle course between two contentions: that the strategic arms talks are to go forward full speed, apart from any progress on political settlement, or that a political settlement must precede any strategic arms talk.

The new administration rejects these extremes, and in doing so the president is breaking new ground in the most significant policy statement he has made since the election. It is this.

"What I want to do is to see to it that we have strategic arms talks in a way and at a time that will promote, if possible, progress on outstanding political problems at the same time — for example, on the problem of the Middle East and other outstanding problems in which the United States and the Soviet Union, acting together, can serve the cause of peace."

This is a departure from Johnson-Rusk-McNamara policy. The Johnson position was that some agreement to cut back nuclear arms is so important that it ought to be sought for itself without any reference to anything else.

The Pennsylvania Story

'More to come'

HARRISBURG — This year may well be the year of the "great shake-up" in the Keystone State — in more ways than one.

When Gov. Raymond Shafer last week tossed out his record-breaking $2.5 billion budget for fiscal 1969-70 and called for enactment of a state income tax to help underwrite his also record-breaking half-billion-dollar tax increase, he shook up not only taxpayers of the Keystone State but also lawmakers on both sides of the aisle.

Trying to find supporters of the administration fiscal blueprint was — and is — like trying to find an antelope on the polar icecap; and the reception of the governor's proposals was just about as cold as both Republican and Democratic legislative ranks.

But while Shafer provided his own shake-up, another of perhaps equal moment was fermenting internally within the legislative branch itself — with the epicenter in the House of Representatives.

During the past two years when Democrats were in the minority in the lower chamber, there was much chit-chat on the part of the Democratic leadership over what they would do if they attained majority status once again.

For the most part this was regarded as so much hot air or pure rhetoric. Nevertheless, last November voters of the Keystone State saw fit to place anti-administration Democrats in control of the House this and next year.

New Democratic Speaker of the House Herbert Fineman and Majority Leader K. Leroy Irvis (who last year served as Minority Leader and Minority Whip respectively) have moved quickly and without fanfare to actually put into action proposals they espoused last year as minority leaders.

What is happening in the House of Representatives is indeed shaking up many an old line GOP legislative warhorse.

Not only have they introduced reforms into the archaic workings of the House of Representatives itself, they have introduced bills to lower the voting age and modernize the state's fiscal establishment — and promised to have them passed. This year they have the "power" in the House to do it.

A year ago, the Republican leadership of the House proposed a commission to modernize the workings of the House. Democrats said they saw no reason for that, added that the House could reform itself, but agreed to go along with the commission idea.

The commission hasn't reported yet, but Democrats already have cut the number of committees and established a subcommittee system. For the first time, the committees will have to meet regularly. They will not be subjected to the dictatorship of the chairman since meetings can be called by a majority of the committee and bills must be considered if two-thirds of the committee members wish to consider them.

The dilatory practice of reading bills at length has been ended. This requirement was seldom enforced, but one member could throw a monkey wrench into the proceedings by moving that the requirement be carried out.

Not content with making the procedures of the House more democratic the Democratic leaders have shown that they mean business in their fight to make sure that the legislature has the tools with which to work.

Shake-ups are already the order of the day and the new year has only just started, or, as they say in the newspaper business when a story isn't finished: "More to come!"

Roses by other names

Burlesque names have always intrigued me. They leave so little to the imagination. I remember when burlesque operated in our city I used to see ads in the paper listing such notables as Busty Dusty, Emma Pearl, two oriental strippers called Rhing Myh Chines and Sin No Mohr; Astro-Naughts and her Way Out Review, Ginger Shapper and of course my favorite, Irma the Body. It spelt my name with a K to save her embarrassment.

I always thought it took a great deal of skill to sit down and come up with a name that was descriptive, original and clever. You know something? A child can do it.

I didn't realize it until I saw a list of entries from a "Name The Cow" contest sponsored by a local dairy. (You may remember this is the contest in which my son entered the name of Big Bill. He didn't win a prize but the dairy offered to let him sit in on a sex refresher course, which includes an armed service film on "You Can't Lately Get Milk From A Bull Anywhere.")

Anyway, I can remember when the names of Bessie, Bossie, Goldie or even Charlotte would have been considered inspired. Not today. Out of a list of 4,000, most of them showed the influence of movies, and television: thoroughly Modern Mooly, Mrs. Olsen, Rosemary's Baby, Earl J. Wagedam, That Cow!, and T.T. Bang Bang.

Politically speaking, there was only one entry, Spiro T. Agnew. (And the Democrats said no one would remember.) Others smacked of old traditions that we know and love: Miss Americow (Eat your heart out, Bert Parks), John's Udder Wife, Mighty Mo, Mooly Dick and Maria Mia. Royalty and people in high places came in for their share of honors: Lady Bird, Queen Liz, Lady Godiva, Lady Guinevere and Omassis. (They didn't say M or Mrs.)

Some of the children had hangups on the cow's anatomy and offered such dandies as: Queen and Her Four Spigots (sounds like a group), Happy Hippie, Betsy Cold Cow, Overflow Annie and Lotus Low-Fat. Small children saw their Jersey friends as:

Dear Abby, Heloise and Moonie Lisa, while a few of the older ones visualized them as sex symbols: Gina, Sophia and Dagmar.

The winner of the competition was a nice, wholesome entry Sweet Rosie O'Grade A. But it does seem a shame that the other 3,999 names will go to waste. If there are any burlesque queens out there in need of a descriptive name, here are a few left-overs: Fat Twiggy, Ring-A-Ding, Curdles La Moo and Hot Tomato Parker! Any of them do anything for you?

STROUDSBURG — Seniors at Stroudsburg High School received first-hand information on the Federal Bureau of Investigation in a talk by Special Agent Robert Davenport, of the Philadelphia office, recently.

Students were briefed on the history of the FBI, its organization and function in the United States Department of Justice, and various phases of FBI work.

Crimes such as kidnapping, extortion, bank robbery and interstate violations are investigated by the FBI, as well as threats to the security of the United States.

A total of approximately 180 investigative matters come under FBI jurisdiction.

The agent told students that non-investigative jobs are available in Washington, D.C. for high school graduates who qualify.

The bidding:
West North East South
1♣ Pass 2♣ 3♦

Opening lead—six of clubs.

I suppose a decent interval of time has elapsed and I may now refer to one of the worst bids ever seen in a world championship event.

The hand occurred during the match between Italy and the United States in 1959.

Siniscalco (West for Italy) opened one club, an artificial bid guaranteeing 17 high-card points, at least. I held the North cards and passed. Forquet responded two clubs, an artificial bid guaranteeing specifically an ace and a king, or three kings.

At this point my illustrious partner, who shall be nameless, entered the fray with three diamonds, which Siniscalco doubled.

I grant that my partner, by his preemptive bid, succeeded in interfering with our opponents' exchange of information, but it was at a terrible cost. South's bid would have made more sense had he held, say, the K-Q-J-10-x-x of diamonds, but with his actual math-eaten six-card suit, the carnage that followed was well-nigh unbearable.

Siniscalco led a club. Forquet won with the ace and returned a low spade, the king losing to the ace. The appearance of the king of spades permitted West to draw the conclusion that his partner's king (as indicated by the bidding) was in hearts.

So Siniscalco led a low heart at trick three, won by East with the king, and a heart return permitted the Italians to cash two more heart tricks.

Next came the king of clubs and queen of spades, and, seven tricks having been played, East-West had garnered them all.

South still had to lose four trump tricks, and so as a result he went down seven—1,300 points. Since the U.S.-East-West pair at the other table got to a normal three notrump contract, making four, the effect of South's hyperthyroid activity was that the American team lost 670 points on the deal.

Just Between Us —

By Bobby Westbrook

There's one thing that the proponents of universal military service for everybody, including women, may not have considered. That's the logistical problem which any commanding officer would face in trying to get any group of women from one place to another before the war was over.

Of course if the opposing forces also conscripted a woman's army, there wouldn't be any war. By the time they got their extra sweaters, pocketbooks, gloves and other vital necessities sorted out and sharing the be so well acquainted that they'd probably work out a cease fire and truce all by themselves.

The annual meeting of the Church Women United could be a case in point. Breaking up the table conversation to start them moving into the chapel for the meeting took a certain amount of time, settling into the chapel seats and then sidling along to make room for more took more time.

When it became obvious that no matter how they squeezed in there it wasn't going to be enough room, they transferred the meeting to the sanctuary, after finally breaking the log jam in the narrow aisle, and then shepherding them all together again after they'd scattered to get their coats in case it was colder upstairs.

They finally made it, and, once settled again, they were attentive, interested and participating. And, actually, what might seem like wasted time to generals and men's clubs really advances the purposes of Church Women United as much as the formal sessions.

There's nothing that can emphasize likenesses and minimize differences, denominational or otherwise, like the small talk that women make among themselves. And what's so "small" about families and food, health and welfare, and personal views on the world at large?

Churchwomen United crowded out of chapel by attendance

EAST STROUDSBURG — An "overflow crowd" was more than a polite term to describe the attendance at the annual meeting of the Monroe County Council of Churchwomen United.

The crowd literally overflowed the small worship chapel at the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church and had to move up to the big church sanctuary for the meeting.

The meeting was preceded by a supper prepared and served by the Women's Society of Christian Service of the host church. They had prepared for 150 and almost all of the places were filled.

The meeting was also distinguished by large attendances from many of the smaller churches of the county.

Obviously encouraged by the attendance, Mrs. Merlin Rutt, president, reviewed the objectives of the organization, citing its ecumenic service in bringing women of many denominations together to work for common causes.

Now in its tenth year, the local council originally sponsored the World Day of Prayer Service as its major interest. It still is an important function of the council.

World Day of Prayer Mrs. Morris Perckman, co-chairman with Mrs. John Appel of last year's observance, announced that the service this year would be held March 7 in the East Stroudsburg Methodist Church at 1:30 p.m.

Theme of the service will be "Growing Together in Christ." She asked that church bells be rung throughout the county at noon that day to remind women of the afternoon service and asked for representatives from each of the member churches to take part in the service which aids world missions.

Other days of observance have been added. Mrs. Harry Smith reported for Mrs. William Kraemer on the May Fellowship Day and Mrs. Rex Worthy on World Community Day and the uses to which the respective offerings were put.

The Christmas stocking project, under the direction of Mrs. Dennis Doud and Mrs. Bruce Flory, was oversubscribed this year. The stockings made by the churches and filled with small gifts were intended for the Allentown State Hospital. When that quota was filled the remaining stockings were sent to the hospital in Hamburg which wrote that they had added greatly to the spirit of Christmas there.

Volunteer Services One of newest and most effective services of the local Church Women United, Mrs. Rutt pointed out, has been the Volunteer Services an outgrowth of a study group in Christian Social Relations.

An informal discussion of these volunteer services was led by the co-chairmen Mrs. Harold S. Pond and Mrs. William P. Wells.

Primarily a "person-to-person" service, the volunteers have branched into many areas where need exists, they explained. It is not connected with any welfare agency, but seeks to supplement those professional services.

The list includes a clothing room; educational series dealing with budgeting, nutritional cooking, home sewing and other phases of family living; camperships and channeling young people into 4-H work; tutoring; housing are all matters of concern.

The services are not limited to the boroughs but may be established wherever they are needed in the county, they stressed, citing activities in other sections.

One goal which they seek is more youth involvement, they said.

There were questions — and some answers — from the floor in the informal discussion.

During the business meeting, officers were elected for the coming year and installed by Mrs. Edward Steinhauser, past president.

New officers Mrs. Merlin Rutt, president; Mrs. Karl Dennis, first vice president; Mrs. Edith Cortright, second vice president; Mrs. Carl Vaughn, recording secretary; Miss Thelma Shaw, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Agnes Beyer, treasurer.

Mrs. Morris Perckman and Mrs. Harold Eaton, commission on world missions; Mrs. Harold S. Pond and Mrs. William Wells, volunteer services; Mrs. William J. Giles, commission on Christian Social Relations; Mrs. William Fizzle and Mrs. Philip W. Storer, commission on world relations; Mrs. Edward Steinhauser, budget; Mrs. Dennis Douds and Mrs. Bruce Flory, Christmas stocking project.

Mrs. Charles Kebisch of the host church gave the welcome and Mrs. Edith Cortright the invocation preceding the dinner.

Opening the meeting, Mrs. Karl Dennis led the worship service and Mrs. Marilyn Latzo sang Will James "Hear My Prayer" with Mrs. Nancy Sandel as accompanist. Mrs. Arthur Kitzman read the minutes of the 1968 meeting.

Miss Thelma Shaw read the roll call of the 30 members churches. Responding were Zion United Church of Christ Stroudsburg; Christ Episcopal Church, Stroudsburg; Trinity Episcopal Church, Mount Pocono.

Lutheran churches: Grace in East Stroudsburg and St. John's Stroudsburg; Methodist Arlington Wesley which with 12 members present had the largest representation, Delaware Water Gap; East Stroudsburg, Mount Pocono; Pocono Lake, Poplar Valley, Stroudsburg, Swiftwater, and Effort.

St. Matthew's Roman Catholic Church; and Presbyterian churches in Delaware Water Gap, East Stroudsburg, Middle Smithfield, Shawnee and Stroudsburg.

Salvation Army; Christian and Missionary Alliance; and Seventh Day Adventist.

The treasurer's report was given by Miss Beatrice Gorgy. Miss Catherine Wolverton reported for the nominating committee which included Mrs. Lawrence Butz, Mrs. Harold Eaton gave the benediction.

How important is a hairdo? Far more than most of us would care to admit. Really beautiful hair artfully arranged has a magic capable of redeeming the plainest of faces, even mesmerizing us into thinking the not impossible jumble of features is attractive. A pretty new coil can send your spirits soaring, just as a dreary one can depress you. And unlike any other fashion or beauty accessory — for that is what your hair really is — a hairdo can truly express your individuality. The nice part of that too, is the fact that no matter your income or station in life, you can have a custom made coil that's uniquely yours, distinctive you.

Amazing PSORIASIS STORY

Pittsburgh, Pa. — "Doctored for psoriasis 30 years. Spent much money to no avail. Then used GHP Ointment and Tablets for 2 weeks. Scales disappeared as if by magic. In 6 weeks skin completely cleared and clean. First time in 30 years. Thanks for your marvelous products." This much abbreviated report tells of a user

Pocono Patter

The cliché, "No rest for the weary," seems to hold true for retired Judge Fred W. Davis. The former judge of the 43rd Judicial District for more than two decades, is frequently disturbed from retirement and put on the bench.

Recently Judge Davis presided over an assault and battery case in the Luzerne County Criminal Court.

Athletic grandson

The grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Patterson of East Stroudsburg has been selected a scholar-athlete of 1968 in Cantonville Senior High School, Cantonville, Md.

The youth, Michael C. DeMauss is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles DeMauss. His mother is the former Rosina Patterson. Michael will be honored by the Greater Baltimore Chapter, National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

Ice victim

The treacherous freezing rain Wednesday which slickened streets and sidewalks with ice claimed a Monroe County Court tipstaff as its victim.

Harry Hoffman of East Stroudsburg, slipped on the slippery sidewalk in front of the Courthouse and tore a leg ligament. He was treated by Dr. Marshall Metzgar of Stroudsburg.

Thank you

Alvin Stiff passes along his thanks to all those who attended the recent YMCA dinner in his behalf.

Alvin is currently a student in a rehabilitation course at Allied Services for the Handicapped at Scranton.

Country-western singer

Mrs. Sandy Davey, wife of 30th District Commander of the American Legion, of Wind Gap, was recently seen and heard by many doing what she likes most—singing country and western music. She recently made an unexpected guest appearance with the Country Cousins.

When asked to do an encore she replied, "I'm too old to sing any more." That's no way for a woman pushing 30 to talk.

Ex-teller pleads guilty

SCRANTON — Robert Clark Jr., formerly of East Stroudsburg, R.D., Friday pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzling $5,000 from The First Stroudsburg National Bank before Federal Judge William J. Nealon in Federal Court, Scranton.

The shortage in the bank was discovered on Sept. 12, 1968 when the cash balance was "out". A check of all accounts in the bank revealed a shortage in the teller's account.

The loss is covered by the bank's insurance and partial restitution has been made by Clark, a bank spokesman said Sunday.

Clark is a son of missionaries who will be leaving for Ecuador.

Area groups take part in camping experiment

STROUDSBURG — Monroe County will be the scene of a unique experiment in summer camping this year, one that may become a model for other sections of the United States.

The Junior National Assn. of the Deaf will conduct a summer camping program for deaf children at Pine Lake Lodge, Stormsville, from July 27 through August 23. Pine Lake Lodge is located near the Quiet Valley Museum.

This camp for the deaf will also feature boys and girls with speech impediments. There probably will be 64 campers the first year.

The Junior National Association of the Deaf is a nationwide organization, with chapters in schools for the deaf throughout the United States.

Officials of the Junior NAD met with community representatives at the Monroe County YMCA Saturday afternoon to outline the organization's summer camp and to win praise from area representatives present.

The Junior NAD's basic objectives are to provide for the young deaf people training in citizenship, an opportunity to contribute to community growth and development, and a medium for self-directed utilization of their potential. The ultimate goal is to safeguard and promote independent living and self-determination of all deaf people of America.

Campers will come from all sections of the United States and are anxious to visit area churches, industries, places of business and areas of recreation while staying in the Pocono Mountains.

Frank R. Turk of Washington, D. C., is the national director of Junior NAD and was present at Saturday's meeting.

The next area meeting for the camp project will be on Friday, March 7.

Police seek two drivers

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg Borough Police are looking for two hit-run drivers involved in accidents over the weekend.

Police said that at 12:08 a.m. Sunday, John Granger of 316 N. Seventh St., Stroudsburg reported his car was hit by an unidentified car as his car was parked.

Police estimate damage to the Granger vehicle at $125.

At 6:03 p.m. Saturday, a car driven by James P. Timmer of Easton, was struck by a car in the intersection of Main and Williams Street.

The hit-run driver left the scene of the accident after the crash.

S-burg teachers' salary plan would cost almost half million

STROUDSBURG — If the Stroudsburg Area School Board granted the Stroudsburg Area Teacher Association's 1968-1970 salary package request, total estimated costs would be approximately $445,400.

The figures were checked with a school board member.

SATA's salary package demands include increasing the minimum starting salary of bachelor degree teachers from the present $5,600 to $7,200.

At present a Master Degree teacher's starting salary at Stroudsburg School District is $6,200. Under the proposed teacher's proposal it would jump to $7,800.

The maximums for a bachelor degree teacher would be $10,800 and for a master degree teacher, $11,400.

The teacher's salary schedule calls for 13 annual increments of $300.

There are 173 teachers in the Stroudsburg School District who would receive approximately an $1,800 increase each under the proposed SATA plan. This would give a figure of $311,400.

There are 71 teachers who have reached the maximum salary scale. SATA is also asking for longevity increments of $300 each in the 15th, 17th and 20th years. The total costs of providing the longevity increments beyond the 15th year would be approximately $45,000.

When fixed costs such as pensions, social security and others are added to the cost of the salary package the total cost of the package is estimated to be $445,400.

Going south for E.S. sailor means trip to Antarctic base

EAST STROUDSBURG — A Navyman called his mother in East Stroudsburg at 1:30 a.m. Saturday and said he was packing for one more trip south.

It was 86 degrees and 6:30 p.m. from where he was calling, and he had just come back from a dip in the ocean.

Going south for him in the morning would not exactly be a vacation adorned with bikini-clad girls lolling on a white beach or palm trees whispering to each other outside a dimly lit cafe bombarded by a steel drum band where the orders of the night were usually drinks, long, dark and cool with several different strains of island rum.

South would be penguins and seals and a 1,200-mile sub-tropical dreary peninsula where Air Boatswain Thad C. Janusz of 453 Hill St. East Stroudsburg is helping to deliver supplies to the U.S. Navy's Antarctic Development Squadron Six (VXE-6).

While much of the world's attention seems to be focused on charting the moon, Squadron Six is making an unheralded effort to photograph a major portion of earth's last frontier: Antarctica.

Two 12-man flight crews of the squadron's photo-configured LC-130 Hercules are being pitted against clouds and sun in a race to photograph the Antarctic Peninsula for the U.S. Geological Survey before winter darkness engulfs the barren white continent.

Janusz's mother, Mrs. Martha Janusz said her son is a member of the flight crew which flies in supplies from New Zealand to Antarctica, roughly a 2,250 mile trip.

Mrs. Janusz said her son told her his quarters at a New Zealand airfield included a wall-to-wall carpet. He hasn't told her about his living quarters at McMurdo Station opposite Little America Station in the Ross Sea, Antarctica.

"I expect it's a little different at the South Pole," Mrs. Janusz said.

Her son will stay at McMurdo for one week and then return to Quonset Point, Rhode Island. Janusz graduated from East Stroudsburg Area high school in 1965 and went into the Navy in January 1966.

After a tour of duty in the Gulf of Tonkin and the Mediterranean he returned to Pensacola Naval Air Base where he was ordered to take part in "Operation Deep Freeze."

Cape Horn

Reaching to within 600 miles of South America's Cape Horn, the Antarctic Peninsula is notorious for some of the world's worst weather. Last season, only 12 clear days were recorded, posing a dim forecast for the 12,000 miles of flight lines to be flown this season.

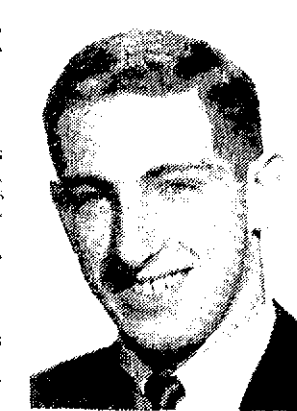

Like other scientific projects supported by the Navy in Operation Deep Freeze, the success or failure of this will be dictated by the erratic Antarctic weather.

The task of mapping the world's longest peninsula and its off-shore islands is an arduous one.

Averaging between 10 and 12 hours a day, crew duty often lasts for as long as 18 to 20 hours.

In addition to the important work over the peninsula, the crews are photographing other areas including the Transantarctic Mountain Range, penguin rookeries, and seal populations. This work, with that of the peninsula, had yielded 80 per cent of the total 1968-1969 aerial photo commitments by mid-January.

The Hercules is fitted with

a tri-camera system, exclusively developed for Antarctic use. The system is operated from 20,000 to 25,000 feet by one of the two Navy photographers assigned to each crew.

The three precision cameras, one aimed straight down and one each at left and right angles, record a horizon-to-horizon aerial photograph, while the aircraft follows a carefully calculated flight path.

Taken from sketchy reconnaissance flights of previous years, these flight lines are determined by the position of the sun, which must be optimum for aerial cartography. Thus, in addition to weather, the time of day also must be considered when planning flight paths.

When photographing mountains, the sun must be overhead because shadows conceal details. Shadows are helpful, however, when the area to be mapped is flat, like featureless ice plains. Then the most revealing photos are taken when the sun is low on the horizon, which in Antarctica is about midnight.

Made into maps

Once the aerial shots are processed, they are made into scaled maps by the U.S. Geological Survey. If this year's task is completed as scheduled, some 175 linear miles of Antarctica's mass will be mapped, providing the world with its first scaled maps of a large part of the continent.

According to Fred Roper, U.S. Geological Survey observer, who flies in all of the missions, "Scientists then will know in more detail what is in the charted areas, and if they want to visit them."

Making long end runs from his warm green base in New Zealand to a cold hostile climate is nothing new for Janusz. He was a former football star and for East Stroudsburg High School.

Taxpayers' League folds

STROUDSBURG — Remember the town meetings? They're dead.

The Monroe County Taxpayers' League provided town meetings. But now it's dead.

Three years ago, when the League was first organized, the Giant Supermarket parking lot in the Stroud Shopping Plaza was packed with county residents. Since then, the League membership deteriorated to nothing.

"Town meetings," said the League's president, W. Schmitt, "those are things of the past."

"Now it's riots," he said.

The Officers of the Taxpayer's League have voted to officially bury the organization which when organized had several hundred members.

The officers, however, state that the League would be reactivated if persons who are interested in the reactivation notify the League officers by Jan. 31. But Schmitt, judging from past experience, doubts if anyone is interested.

The League originally was a watch dog for spending tax money — primarily by school districts. The activities heightened during Monroe County's reassessment program and then died.

Officers state that there is still a balance in the League treasury, but that the funds — totaling approximately $200 — will be given to the community chest if there is no interest toward reactivation.

Persons interested in forming the League again, should contact Anna Altmeppen or Schmitt.

S. Sterling resident calls protest meeting

MOUNT POCONO — "When the people get to the point where they are being taxed out of existence, comes the revolution," said Leo W. McCormick, South Sterling, who spoke Sunday at a meeting of "People who do not intend to stand still."

More than 50 persons, Republicans and Democrats alike, came from as far west as Pittsburgh, as far south as Philadelphia and from points in-between, to discuss what McCormick called, "The biggest sucker state in the union." And they came as Pennsylvanians who mean to raise a voice and ask why and to work until they have the answers.

"The meeting was held in Mount Pocono in a place where McCormick refused to divulge. The meeting was held in opposition to a state income tax."

"The sons of the idle rich don't care about the fellow who is working and being taxed to death," said McCormick, a fiery Republican, well known in Washington circles. "It's time we became a people awakened. We are non-partisans, genuine Pennsylvanians and we mean business in an all out revolution against the injustice of it all."

"I'm against hand-picked so-called Republican administrations such as the one headed by that of Shafer," he said. "And, I'd do anything possible to try to save this great state. We as an organization are for the poor little guy who is being taxed right out of his paycheck."

"Remember back when George Leader campaigned that as governor he would eliminate the one per cent sales tax in Pennsylvania? He was elected and he did eliminate it and made it three percent."

Then came David Lawrence and a four per cent sales tax. Then came the Connecticut Yankee, William Scranton and the five per cent sales tax. And now we have Gov. Shafer and the six per cent sales tax."

"We of the committee who met on Sunday are outspokenly opposed to this tax situation and ready to do something about it. It has been said that taxes are the lice on the backs of the workers."

A meeting is being planned this week in Harrisburg to continue the organization.

4-H leaders to meet on Thursday

TANNERSVILLE — Leaders and officers of the Tannersville 4-H Community Club will meet Thursday at the Central Pocono Ambulance Building in Tannersville at 7:30 p.m. to discuss plans and projects for the year.

The club recently elected officers for 1969.

They are Mary Ann Ronckamp, president; Mary Ann Butz, vice president; Denise Dodd, secretary; Paula Debra, treasurer; Scarlett Klingel, news reporter; Dixie Klingel, Anna Coslar, and Sharon Klingel, social chairman.

Miss Anne Lott, assistant Monroe County Extension agent, showed slides and told about the Scottish people and their ways of life. Miss Lott spent six months in Scotland.

'Watching' winter

Same old story—more winter

STROUDSBURG — A thick-set, grizzled, chestnut-red, stout-bodied, short-legged, bushy-tailed marmot was seen Sunday at the break of day, squatting on its haunches before the entrance to its burrow, sniffing the winter air in expectation of remaining to enjoy an early spring.

The sun was strong and bright, however, and the shadows were cast across the hillsides, where the burrowing rodent makes his home.

If the commonly upheld superstition holds true, we're out of the early spring bit and in for at least another six weeks of more snow and cold temperatures.

Brieder Grundis (Brothers Groundhog) of Monroe County's two Groundhog Lodges uphold the annual walk to the southern exposed hillsides in search for the "wedder brofate" (weather prophet and witness the sudden disappearance of the meager-looking groundhog, frightened by his own shadow).

Lodge members are scattered far and wide and are more preoccupied with modern thoughts and responsibilities so they appoint a delegation of "wedder barichda" (weather forecasters) to prepare for a random tromp among the hills to spot their burrowing predictor in hopes of having a common chat with him and convince him to stay around a bit to usher in Spring.

In their own dialogue, the "wedder barichda" would say "Wen da docks sei shoda sahnt, do gibts noh sex wocha may winder," and in song they would uphold their belief and tradition with "Oh die alt groe grundsw is der besht wedder brofate."

Although Feb. 2, Ground Hog Day is a noted American tradition it has its founding in the old Germany and Great Britain with devoted followers scattered throughout Pennsylvania and some other states.

But the celebrated day had added meaning for the Pennsylvania Dutch who have formed 15 Grundsw Lodges in the State to preserve the good-natured spirit and manner of their fathers, in the dialogue in which it was lived and spoken.

At their annual banquets held in the Spring, a notice is posted to remind anyone who tries to revert back to common English: "Brieder Grundis, nemma des in oecht; English Schweize Kosht; 10 Cents the wert; All bens shirfe gelt gait zum March of Dimes." Basically it means there is a fine to anyone who forgets to speak "deitsch" during the "fersommeling."

"Die richdicha Grundsw Dawg Wedder Barichda" (The correct groundhog day weather forecast) will be given by the delegates, to their Lodge or "Rowd" members. These are, Leon Keller and Theodore Bollinger in the West End for Lodge Six and Dr. Floyd Shafer, Joseph Altmeppen and James Koppenhaver for Lodge 10 in the Stroudsburg area.

Their verdict will say:

"Die alt groe grundsw is noh widder el g'shlopt, fer sex wocha long."

Even though science does not support the groundhog's willingness to tell us something, the day revives a feeling known only to the true "Brieder Grundis" as they sing their "Grundsw Lied."

It basically says the hour has come to sing about the groundhog and his hole.

Stroudsburg firemen dance to 'hot' tune

STROUDSBURG — Stroudsburg firemen left their own firemen's dance Saturday night shortly after they hit the dance floor at 10 p.m. in George N. Kemp Post 346, American Legion, East Stroudsburg.

A fire alarm sounded at 10:40 p.m. After firemen were interrupted during their big annual social event sponsored for the borough, their services were not even required when they arrived at Hentze's Laundromat on N. Ninth St. when some lint under a drier was ignited.

Some 175 persons attended the dance with music provided by the Lee Vincent orchestra of Wilkes-Barre.

Firemen were also called prior to the dance, at 4:15 p.m. to the apartment of Mrs. Ella Margretta at 525 Sarah St., where a cooking pot was left on the stove and its contents burned.

No service was required.

Lock Haven routs ESSC, 29-6

By TED WISMER
Record Sports Editor

EASTSTROUDSBURG—Lock Haven won the battle of the sophomores Saturday night and tightened its hold as the outstanding team in the Pennsylvania Conference.

The Bald Eagles, with seven sophomores in the lineup, handed East Stroudsburg State eight sophomores one of its most defeats in the last five years, 29-6 before 3,200 fans in Koehler Fieldhouse.

ESSC coach Red Witman made five major two because of an injury to co-captain Dan Rossi lineup changes and came up a loser in all five.

With the exception of Tom Best (130) the other moves appeared to be the right decision until the final seconds of the final period.

Seven Lock Haven grapplers put unbeaten records on the line and only heavyweight Scott Brooks emerged as a loser.

Witman felt the most disappointing part of the night was the "strategy" used by some of his boys, especially in the final periods.

The 115-pound bout set the tempo for the night as the Eagles' Don Fay (6-0) edged Ted Pease, making his first appearance at this weight.

Pease took Fay down in the opening period but Fay later escaped. Fay tied the score with an escape early in the second then took Pease down with a double-leg takedown. Pease again escaped but Fay scored another takedown. Then in the final period Pease regained the lead with a reversal and predicament.

But Fay again tied the score at 7-7 with an escape and again took Pease down. Pease made it 9-8 with another escape. Pease appeared to have gained a possible winning takedown with 29 seconds left but referee Vince Zuaro ruled them off the mat. Fay then drew a warning for stalling but managed to avoid another call and gained a 9-8 win.

Ray Manniller, the toughest Warrior to pin in practice, drew the assignment of taking on NCAA national champion Ken Melchior at 123. And Manniller made the move pay off as he refused to allow Melchior to turn him over and the Eagle veteran had to settle for a 13-0 win.

Then came one of the turning points in the bout as Shane Foley (5-0) caught Best in a cradle in the second period and gained his fifth fall of the season. Foley had a 4-0 lead at the time as the result of a first period takedown and second period reversal.

At 137 pounds Lock Haven's Larry Rippey proved to be too strong on his feet for Tony Ptak in a 13-5 win. Rippey took Ptak down five different times while Ptak gained all his points on escapes.

The 145-pound bout was the first of two straight heart-breakers for Warrior fans. ESSC's Tom Huber and the Eagles' Paul Brodmerkel were locked in a 6-6 tie late in the third period with the former having riding time. But Brodmerkel picked up five quick points on a reversal and near fall to gain an 11-7 win that gave the Eagles a 17-0 lead.

The 152-pound bout was even tougher on the hometown fans as Gene Taxis scored a takedown at the final buzzer to gain a 10-9 win over John Pitzer.

Pitzer, who wrestled with leg cramps for almost the final two periods, took a 7-6 lead into the final period and then picked up a predicament early in the third period. But Taxis made it 9-7 with an escape. Then with time running out Taxis had 1:59 riding time and needed a takedown. Taxis shot in for a leg takedown and just managed to grab an ankle of the back-peddling Pitzer. Just as Pitzer fell to the mat and Zuaro awarded the two-points the buzzer sounded.

Bob DeVore finally got the Warriors on the board as he built up a 5-1 lead on two takedowns and an escape against Willie Yukes and held on to gain a 6-1 win.

Barry Rhodes used a three-minute ride in the second period, and an escape and takedown in the third to blank Fred Epler, 5-0 at 167 pounds.

Chris Greening, making his first start for ESSC, led Bob Metz 1-0 after two periods as the result of a second period escape. But Metz used an escape and takedown in the third period and picked up two time points for a 5-3 win.

Hank Hawkins scored two takedowns and an escape and picked up two time points en route to a 7-2 win over John Felder at 191.

In the final bout Rich Schumacher used an escape and two takedowns to easy down Scott Brooks, 6-2.

ESSC salvaged the freshman meet, 25-22 as each team forfeited two weights.

Rangers outscore Penquins

NEW YORK (UPI)—Jean Ratelle scored two goals and set up two others and defenseman Brad Park had four assists to help the New York Rangers overcome an early deficit and rout the Pittsburgh Penguins 7-3 Sunday night.

The seven goals equaled a season high for the Rangers in the National Hockey League and came after they had fallen behind 2-0 in the opening period on shots by Val Fonteyne and Jean Pronovost.

Ratelle started the New York comeback in the closing minutes of the first period and New York moved ahead for good with a three-goal burst by Rod Gilbert, Bob Nevin and Ratelle in the second session.

Stewart and Arnie Brown scored within a 31-second span early in the final period and Vic Hadfield added a power-play goal, his 20th marker of the season, to wind up the scoring. The third Pittsburgh goal had come from Ken Schinkel in the final minute of the second period and the Penguin deficit to 4-3 at that time.

Brown's goal, which came on an assist from Hadfield at 4:49 of the third period, was his fifth in the last 14 games.

Warrior gymnasts split

EAST STROUDSBURG — ESSC's women's gymnastics team opened its season Saturday with a victory and a loss.

In a close tri-meet at Brockport State College in New York, Ithaca scored 63.0 points to East Stroudsburg's 55.8, while Brockport scored 60.35. Tough scoring in the vaulting event and falls off the balance beam kept the Warriors from overtaking Ithaca.

Freshman Pat Gadomski, in her first varsity meet, picked up a second place in uneven bars competition. Peggy Peters and Barb Burnett also took seconds in floor exercise and balance beam respectively.

Following the meet an exhibition was given by Kathy Gleason of Buffalo, a member of the '68 Olympic Team. Kathy will be visiting East Stroudsburg on March 1 to compete in the Eastern Inter-collegiate Championships here.

The next meet for ESSC's female gymnasts will be Tuesday at 6:30 p.m. against West Chester. This contest was rescheduled from the Dec. 18 postponement and will be held in Zimlar Gym.

Lukewarm? Lookout!

By JEAN ADAMS

NO ZING: (Q) My girl friend is the nicest and most well-mannered girl I've ever dated. We have fun on our dates and never have any spats.

She's the kind of girl a guy would want to marry. I've thought of asking her when the time is right. Just one thing worries me. We do a lot of kissing, but when we do I feel very little.

I thought that when you loved someone you felt very good when you kissed. What do you think I should do? She's still in her teens. I'm 20 now.

Undecided in Winston-Salem, N.C.

(A) The time is not right for you to ask her. The right time could come later when you and she are older, but only if you warm up to her and your regard for her grows into something stronger.

Unless it does, beware. A marriage without fire in it is gray and cold and likely to die.

NOSE IN WAY: (Q) What can I do for my nose? It looks exactly like Rudolph the Red-

Nosed Reindeer's. Don't tell me to keep it out of the sun. It isn't sunburned. It's just red. It also has blackheads on it.

I want to turn on around the girls, but my nose gets in the way.

Dan in Lincoln, Neb.

(A) If you were a girl you could cover it with make-up. But you're not, so your best bet is a good dermatologist. He may be able to prescribe something to tone down or camouflage the redness, and he certainly can take care of the blackheads. Keeping your nose clean (with soap and water) will also be good for them.

When you've done all you and the dermatologist can, forget your nose and turn the girls on with any good points you may have — such as eyes, build, voice, posture, personality.

Activist, 80, has day for everything

POTTSTOWN, Pa. (AP) — At 80, the life of Jeanne V. Gutman is accelerating at roller coaster speed. She finds idleness boring.

A widow at 59, Mrs. Gutman has a day for almost everything: on Wednesdays she helps retarded boys and girls at the Pennhurst State School; on Thursdays she conducts a nursery class at a Methodist church.

Work stops on parking garage job

STROUDSBURG — A jurisdictional dispute between laborers and carpenters have caused a work stoppage on the new A.B. Wyckoff parking garage in Stroudsburg.

Representatives of the unions and foremen were unable to be contacted for comment. However, one of the contractors on the job, who wishes to remain unidentified as he is not involved in the dispute, said laborers employed by Glenwall Engineers and Construction Co. and the masons, employed by C.B. Haney, Inc., Bethlehem, are having jurisdictional dispute problems.

The laborers are reported to have jurisdiction of putting up scaffolds to a height of 14 feet and from that elevation and up the carpenters are said to have jurisdiction.

The dispute started about a week or 10 days ago, according to the spokesman, and the issues were sent to the international headquarters of both unions. On Wednesday there was no satisfactory answer to the issue and a work stoppage began.

E. S. night classes set for today

EAST STROUDSBURG — Adult Classes at East Stroudsburg High School begin Monday night and Wednesday night next week.

Monday classes that will be held are: study of antiques, golf, advanced and life saving swimming, typing I, ceramics and sewing.

Wednesday classes are: typing II, bookkeeping I, knitting, fundamentals of the stock market, oil painting, and drafting. Driver training classes will be held on Saturday morning.

Anyone wishing to register for these classes may still do so at the high school Monday, or Wednesday.

Classes begin at 7:30 p.m. and end at 9 p.m. for a period of weeks ending the week of April 14.

Two couples seeking licenses

STROUDSBURG — Claude H. Counterman, 22, Stroudsburg, R.D. 2, and Lorraine M. Collins, 20, Stanhope, N.J., were one of two couples to apply for a marriage license Friday in the Monroe County Courthouse.

The second couple was May L. Michael, 26, Skytop, and Alretta J. Hothwell, 32, Skytop.

on Saturdays she teaches art at a Lutheran church.

For the Jewish Women's League of the Mercy and Truth Synagogue of Pottstown, of which she is a former president, Mrs. Gutman plans parties — "usually about six a year" — at the nearby Valley Forge Army Hospital and the Coatesville Veterans Hospital.

In 1962, just past 74, she took up painting — "people seem to enjoy my landscapes and works depicting nature" — and has made 51 sales.

Three years ago, anxious for a new interest, she started taking violin lessons.

"I was getting to the point where I was able to play some songs, when I injured my wrist in an automobile accident," she recalls. "I had to give it up for a while, but occasionally I take out the instrument and practice some scales."

Mrs. Gutman moved to Pottstown three years after her husband died in Stroudsburg, Pa., where the couple owned a Pocono Mountain resort hotel.

She quickly leaped into volunteer work, taking on the nursing post first. Because of affiliation with the Pennsylvania Association for Retarded Children this led to Pennhurst where she teaches speech therapy.

Chairmen to head area heart drives

STROUDSBURG — Appointments of H.B. George and Daniel G. Warner for Stroudsburg, Jack Bernbaum for East Stroudsburg, Mrs. Robert J. Arner for the West End, Mrs. William Powlett and Mrs. Daniel Krynick for Mount Pocono, as chairmen of the 1969 Heart Days-For-Business campaign in Monroe County was announced Friday by Dr. Richard H. Luce, County Heart Fund Chairman.

This solicitation of local commercial and professional establishments affords local businessmen an opportunity to contribute to the annual Heart Fund campaign.

Walter Adelman is chairman for industrial solicitation.

Finishing date — The business campaign will be conducted here during Heart Month, starting today, Luce stated. He expressed hope that all solicitation will be completed and his will be turned in to Heart Fund headquarters not later than February 28.

Dr. Luce said about 25 representatives of the business community are being recruited to serve as volunteers in Monroe County.

Roemerville man injured

PANTHER — Gerald Obert of Roemerville Friday was injured in an accident on Rt. 447 in front of the Conrad Miel home.

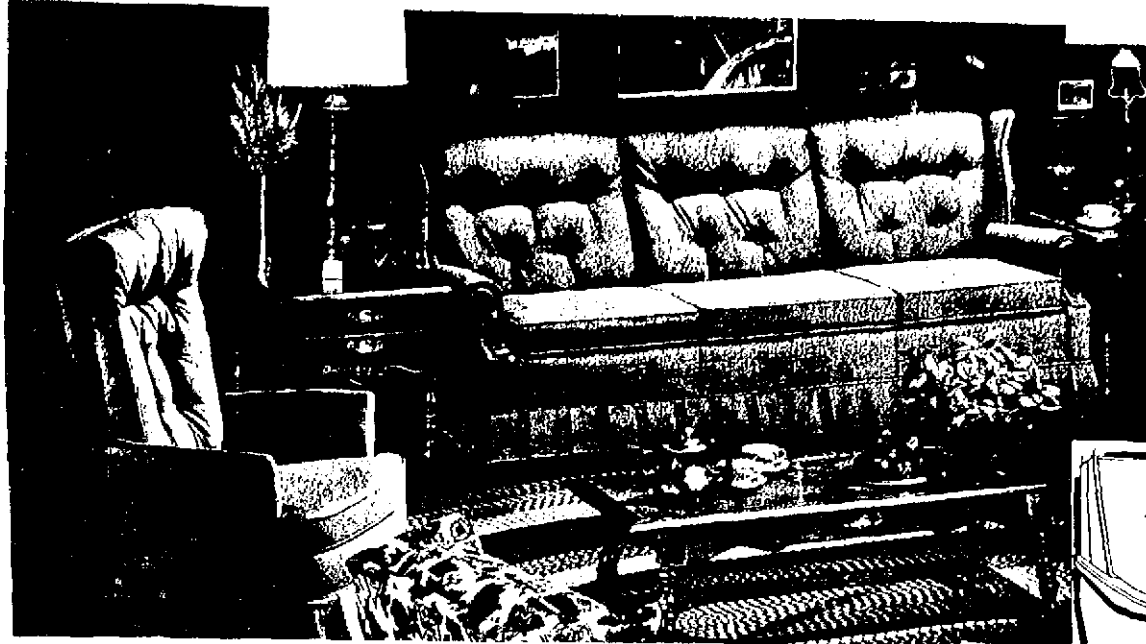

Obert was taken to the General Hospital of Monroe County where he was admitted. A spokesman at the hospital said his condition was guarded.

The accident happened at 5:45 p.m.

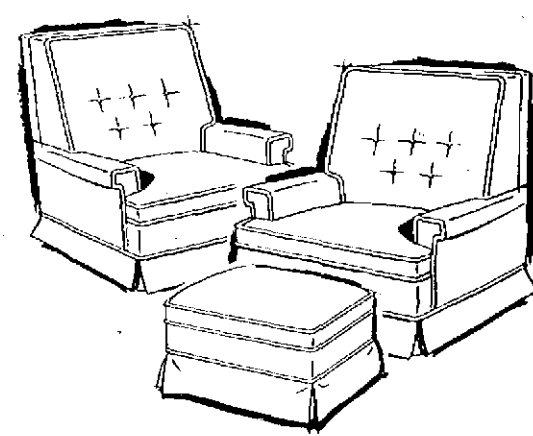

State Police from Milford had no particulars on the accident.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Zsa Zsa told friends excitedly she'd just had a remarkable experience: her first ride in the subway and, "Dollink, they ver packed in like caviar!" Lynda Bird saw "Hadrian VII" a few days before the inauguration with all

VIP and Secret Service trappings; now she may have to pay for her seats. The concert in-folk say tenor Robert Lawrence, a New York Hospital employe, is due for singing stardom. One year ago Russia's Ambassador to the U.S. Dobrynin advised the Kremlin LBJ positively would be in the White House "Until 1972". Moscow's propaganda radio to Africa pours anti-Israeli fiction into the Dark Continent; strictly from Gaebbel's litany of lies. Gore Vidal's own screenplay for his "Myra Breckenridge" nausea will be supplanted by a new writer's.

Tennessee Williams assured friends tales of his serious illness were exaggerated, suggesting the relative who revealed them "has the usual Williams' family's creativity".

Shapeliest of the Gaslight Club's brief-costumed hostesses Leigh Adams won a small role in "The Pro" with Charlton Heston and it's opened more doors than Leigh opens champagne bottles. Vogue's "American Woman" spread features French model Francoise Rubartelli and a British Jaguar car. Charley O's sign note its hours are from noon to 2 a.m. but "We'll stay open as long as you keep drinking."

New drupe on Liberace's piano is pure vicuna. Shortest doorman on Bdwy. has had the longest run: Peewee Marquette at the Hawaii Kai has been there in front of the Winter Garden Building restaurants since the Zanzibar 30 years ago. Money in voyeurism: Hugh Hefner's Playboy enterprises grossed $95,000,000 in '68.

"Hair" producer Michael Butler hired the both - 24-year-old decorating team of Guilford & DeCordova to give his new duplex pad the hairy works. Nude in her first film's torrid sex scenes, Barbara McNair dons a nun's outfit for "A Complete Change of Habit". MCA-Universal boss Jules Stein's tossing a junket for the W. Coast premiere of "Sweet Charity" with critics and columnists from Europe as well as the USA.

Richard Burton's hosting the "Where Eagles Dare" junket to Las Vegas leaving and returning on the lucky dates of Feb. 7 & 11 aboard United's flight 711. But is the picture any good? Young comic Marty Barris took London television by storm and now awaits U.S. recognition.

Underworld criticism of most gangster pictures' depiction of the top Mafiosi: "They talk too loud."
